Gar LaSalle is an award-winning author and critically acclaimed teacher, storyteller, lecturer and history savant living in the Pacific Northwest. His captivating, masterfully written novel 'Widow Walk' earned the 2015 Eric Hoffer Award in commercial fiction. 'Isthmus', the second book in his critically acclaimed Widow Walk Saga, was a 2015 Nancy Pearl contest finalist in genre fiction.

PREVIOUS MEDIA COVERAGE AND REVIEWS

"Widow Walk is American Historical Fiction in the finest tradition, a direct descendent of Last of the Mohicans and Cold Mountain. LaSalle recounts the brutal, poignant clash between Native American Indian tribes and white settlers in the Pacific Northwest with economy and beauty, writing clean, devastating prose that clutches at your heart. This lean, unsparing narrative will make you look away in sorrow—before raising your fist in triumph. A quintessential rendering of the American Experience."

- Richard Barager

Author of Altamont Augie, Silver Medal winner 2011 Book of the Year Award

LaSalle skillfully entwines the paths of his well-built characters and shines as a historian and storyteller of the first order. ("Widow Walk) is an earnest, intelligent treat for fans of historical fiction.

- Kirkus Reviews

"Widow Walk' is a finely crafted narrative of the U.S. expansion into the final frontiers of present-day Washington State."

- Women's Adventure Magazine
